What is...

DownEast

The DownEast National Juried Indoor Sculpture Exhibition is located in Pitt County, North Carolina. The month long indoor exhibition at Emerge Gallery coincides with the year long exhibition throughout Pitt County. The indoor exhibition is a competition that celebrates the very best of three-dimensional art forms. Any three-dimensional media that occupies space defined through the dimensions of height, width, and depth is eligible, i.e. ceramics, small metals, large scale metals, fibers, and mixed media.

Meet the Juror

James Matson is a sculptor and set designer living in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. He started off as a potter but kept sticking chunks of steel and wood into chunks of clay until it wouldn't fit in the kiln anymore.

His work centers around personal narratives seeking to find those universal moments that we share as individuals. His focus on the relationship between space and form is central to all his sculptural work.

He recently retired from teaching after thirty-five years of Sculpture, Ceramics, and Three-Dimensional Design. His work has been seen both here and abroad and is part of several collections.
